BOY SCOUTS GIVE DEMONSTRATION OF ACCOMPLISHMENTS

What Scouting Means and What It Does For Boys Shown in Play.

HAS PATRIOTIC FEATURES

Introductory is Assembly of Allied Nations; This is Followed by the Staging of Scenes Exemplifying of Various Activities of the Scouts.

An audience of several hundred enjoyed the play put on at the high school auditorium last night by the Connellsville Boy Scouts, showing what scouting means for boys, just what the movement has led to, and how it makes good citizens for the future of the boys of today.

The play gave parents and friends of the boys an idea of what scouts are taught by their leaders, how the meetings are conducted, hikes in the woods, and also showed the clean friendly spirit that prevails when scouts gather around the campfire.

The play opened with an assembly of the allied nations. As a flag bearer, flanked on either side by a scout as color guards, walked on to the stage, the national anthem of that nation would be sung. It was an excellent introduction to the scout play as part of the scout oath is "I will do my best to do my duty to God and my country." All the songs, some of which were very difficult, were excellently rendered.

The Belgian anthem was sung by John Davis, the French by E. W. Haviland, the English by Ray McClintock, the Italian by Miss Anita Gandolfi and "The Star Spangled Banner" by Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson Morton. Miss Jennie Gandolfi was accompanist. The Baltimore & Ohio orchestra furnished music throughout the evening.

The scoutmaster in the play was acted by Rev. J. G. Nace, who had as his Assistant Scoutmasters Ray Lambert and W. F. Underwood. The scoutmaster was R. C. Will, who holds that title in the Local Council of this city. Members of the various troops took the parts of the scouts, patrol leaders and scribe.

One scene was representative of a scout meeting. New candidates were introduced. Boys, typical of an unclean life, made application for entry into the troop and were told the requirements of a scout. Later scenes showed how the boys as scouts had changed for a better and cleaner life. The scouts also tied knots. Scout Black gave the bugle calls, and Assistant Scoutmaster W. F. Underwood gave the wood drill.

During an intermission W. F. Schenck, president of the Local Council, delivered an address, telling just what the movement meant and how it was growing in the city.

The boys also signalled messages from the stage to the rear of the auditorium. Each message was repeated by the boys who took it. One message, written by a person in the audience, was then sent back to those scouts on the stage. The two messages were:

THIEVES CLEAN OUT SUPPLY OF "DOPE" AT WEST SIDE DRUG STORE

Smash Plate Glass Window; Proprietress Hears Noise But Blames It on Cat; Other Thieves.

Dope funds broke into the Beighley drug store on the West Side last night and secured a large quantity of narcotic drugs in addition to other articles. The exact quantity of stolen goods has not yet been listed but it is plainly evident the main effort of the robber was directed at getting the drug.

The robbery took place about 2 o'clock this morning, the burglars gaining an entrance by smashing a plate glass window at one side of the store with a heavy board. The apartment above the store is occupied by the Beighleys, and Mrs. Beighley heard the crash of glass when the window was broken but she thought a cat had upset something in the storeroom.

When she went downstairs this morning the broken window was discovered and the drugs found to be missing. The thieves took all available narcotics.

No money was secured as nothing is left in the cash drawer during the night.

Another robbery, thought to have been perpetrated by boys, took place at the home of Sol Rosenfield at 404 Stephen street on the Pinnacle. Two children's banks were taken and also some money from a pocketbook. The total sum stolen amounted to about $20. Entrance to the home was gained through a window.

One of the small banks was found in a nearby street broken open and the money gone. The other bank was not found.

H. Miller, arrested by the Baltimore & Ohio police at the station, is being held for attempting to rob a man there.

PERRYOPOLIS READY FOR OBSERVANCE OF MEMORIAL OCCASION

Parade, Speaking and Banquet for Soldiers Included on the Program for May 30.

Following its long-established custom Perryopolis will on Memorial Day pay fitting tribute to the soldier dead. There remain but a half dozen veterans of the Civil War but they will participate as usual, joining with the younger generations in proper observance of the day. Proud of the fact that they have contributed in every way toward the World War—in men, in money, in work—the community will make this an occasion of unusual interest. The committee in charge is composed of 1. Buell Snyder, Thomas Hixenbaugh, Bertie Luce, Charles Martin and Bert Duff.

The program provides for a parade at 10:15 o'clock, speaking in Washington Square at 11, a banquet for the soldiers at 1 o'clock and speaking at the cemetery at 2:30.

Speakers for the day will include Dr. William Davidson, superintendent of the schools of Pittsburgh and Rev. C. W. Buckner of Connellsville.

The parade will form at the high school building and march over the principal streets, ending at Washington Square, where the following program will be rendered:

Community singing, Daniel McDonald, leader; invocation, Rev. Charles Fargie, Layton; patriotic singing, Jackson Sunday school; address, Rev. W. S. Bryan; quartet, Mrs. Edna Luce, Miss Kathryn Barr, Mrs. W. L. Rife and Mrs. Charles Chaffant; patriotic eulogy, Dr. William Davidson, superintendent of the Pittsburgh schools; patriotic drill, Wick Haven Sunday school.

At the conclusion of the program the soldier boys will go to the Methodist Episcopal church where the people of the township will banquet them. Every soldier boy is urged to be present.

The program to be carried out at Washington cemetery at 1:30 o'clock follows:

Royal drum corps, Perryopolis; community singing, Mr. McDonald; leader; invocation, Rev. L. F. Atkey; singing; address, Rev. W. H. Wharton; community singing; address, Rev. G. W. Buckner, Connellsville; music; address, Dr. Davidson.

BOY SCOUTS GIVE DEMONSTRATION

ages were "For better scouting in Connellsville" and "Connellsville is back of the scouts."

In the third part the boys were shown in the woods, where they camped out for the night. The scouts showed the boys setting up their camp and preparing for a meal. The headquarters patrol gave a demonstration of squad drilling under Scout Commissioner R. C. Win.

Other boys gave demonstrations of bandaging and other first aid training they receive as scouts. The scouts also demonstrated how they could make a litter from two shirts and two long sticks.

The resuscitation of a drowning boy was also demonstrated, the prostrate scout being carried into camp after being rescued from the swimming hole.

W. F. Underwood spoke on the need of more scoutmasters and assistants to keep pace with the growth of the movement in the city. There are many boys waiting for a chance to become scouts, he said, and to accommodate them new troops will have to be organized as most of the ones in the city are now filled.

The last scene of the play showed the boys around their camp fire. They sang the scout songs and gave the scout yell. Camp stories were told and taps was sounded.

THE HEALTH RECORD OF THE 110TH REGIMENT.

With that modesty which is characteristic of the true soldier, Major R. S. McKee, surgeon of the 110th Infantry, during his tour of duty in the Federal service, takes no credit to himself for the magnificent health record of this famous regiment. Like Colonel "Joe" Thompson, the regiment's commander, he attributes to the boys themselves all the praise for having won all the honors coming to this unit of fighters.

"The record," says Major McKee, "was due to the outdoor life they lived and the care they had taken of themselves."

That is the major's way of saying he himself disclaims all honor or praise for the wonderful immunity from disease enjoyed by the 6,000 men who made up the personnel of the regiment, including the replacements. But the boys know that except for the vigilant and watchful attention of Major McKee and his assistants of the Medical Detachment, and the insistence by them upon the observance of all sanitary regulations, and intelligent care by the men of their bodies as the requisite of good health, they would not have been entitled to any share of the credit Major McKee modestly gives to the men without reserving any for himself.

During the training period at Camp Hancock no doubt the more inexperienced members of the regiment chafed a little and regarded as unnecessary the restrictions and regulations imposed by Major McKee as means to safeguard the health of the men. Little by little they began to understand why all the things prescribed were necessary to be done and they accepted them as much a part of the routine of duty as they did drill, guard duty and other daily exercises. The longer they were in the service the more did they appreciate the benefits derived from the sanitary precautions they had learned to take. In the splendid health record of the regiment they find abundant proof of the wisdom of the provisions made for their well-being and we doubt not every man in the regiment feels a debt of gratitude to Major McKee. At any rate, if you were to ask the men their opinion of the subject of the low death rate from natural causes they, with equal modesty as to their part in making the record, will very readily say that all the honor is due Major McKee and his staff. And they would be very far wrong, the major's protestations to the contrary notwithstanding.

SAFETY GATE ARGUMENTS.

With pedestrians almost equalling in number the entire population of Connellville and its suburbs, and 1,500 vehicles of various kinds, crossing the tracks of the Pennsylvania railroad on North Pittsburgh street in a day, and dodging 25 trains while making the crossing, an argument is presented which, next to the number of fatalities that have occurred at the grade crossings in the city, makes the installation of safety gates imperative necessary.

More proof of the dangers involved in permitting these crossings to remain unprotected is certainly not needed by the Public Service Commission in order to convince that body of its duty to the public of this city. If further proof is necessary it can be provided, in the case of the North Pittsburgh street crossing, by supplying a drawing or blue print showing how the view of approaching trains, both north bound and south bound, is obstructed by the adjacent buildings. The same holds good with respect to the West Crawford avenue crossing on the West Side.

It is true that other crossings are perhaps less dangerous than these two but the statistics of travel over them, in addition to information concerning the accidents that have occurred, ought to satisfy the commission that the same measure of protection should be provided for all as well as for one crossing within the city limits.

From the results obtained by other municipalities in forcing the crossing issue it seems that Connellville ought to fare as well at the hands of the Public Service Commission, and it is no doubt will if all the available information is presented when request is made for an order to install safety devices.

Major McKee's expression of thanks that the French are wine drinkers is not to be construed as approval of convivial habits among a people, but rather to commend their preparedness for war. At that this preparation arises from the use the major says he and his comrades made of the cellars they discovered.

President Wilson is not alone in

LABOR AND COMPULSORY HEALTH INSURANCE.

Some of the advocates of compulsory health insurance who are more zealous than they are correctly informed, have been giving currency to the statement that organized labor is demanding the enactment of such legislation. That this is not in accordance with the facts is controverted by the best evidence that can be offered, the public statements of the administrative head of one of the most conservative labor organizations in the United States. Discussing the subject recently, Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and chairman of the social insurance department of the National Civic Federation, declared that his organization does not want any such form of insurance.

"Our organization has, for years been fighting this form of medical autocracy," added Mr. Stone. "I do not want any man sent to my house with power to enter and examine me or any of my friends. Under some of these proposed laws, and all of them I think, the individual cannot in any way choose his physician, even if he wants one. Some doctor is selected to look over promiscuously some five hundred individuals who must submit to this encroachment on their personal rights without question. The whole thing is un-American to my sense of things, autocratic and useless."

"We are sending out just now to our members large numbers of the address by Dr. George E. Tucker, formerly associated with the National Industrial Conference Board as its chief medical investigator. Dr. Tucker declared that 'social insurance is an integral part of Germanism, an adjunct of the militarism that leads directly to social slavery along the well-trodden paths of paternalism, registration, inspectorships, and the whole mechanism of docketing and discipline.' Furthermore, he said that 'the professional social reformer' and 'for revenue only' human uplifter groping blindly for some new panacea upon which to focus public attention gladly accept and enthusiastically welcome any proposal which, for the time being, offers opportunity for publicity and incidentally for replenishment of an always too uncertain financial income."

"Dr. Tucker has stated, and we agree with him, that 'compulsory health insurance, as revealed by the evidence, has already been a signal failure in Great Britain because of the lack of fundamental knowledge of the public health problem, and because the principle upon which it is established lacks the element essential to a scheme seeking to be considered an insurance proposal; and that the essential difficulties requiring solution in connection with the public welfare from a health standpoint would not be met and in the main their prevention would be entirely ignored. Also, facts show that the cost is always out of proportion to the benefits to be derived, and finally that neither we nor any of the allied countries would be justified in copying any German plan which is known to have been conceived in inequity, enforced through individualism and aimed to destroy individualism and democracy.'"

"Again, the California Research Society of Social Economics has declared that the bill will destroy medical freedom, compel the workman to buy and pay for sickness insurance whether he wants it or not and make his home subject to invasion by inquisitive political 'inspectors' and 'investigators.' Finally, it says that 60 per cent of illness is preventable. Why, then, should these workmen be called upon to pay out millions for misfortunes that may be prevented by other means? These are some of the reasons why the International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is opposed to all forms of compulsory health insurance."

Incidentally they are just the same reasons why most people, who have considered the question as carefully as has Chief Stone, are opposed to such a form of paternalism in government.

For once Secretary Daniels is right. The country wants no Sampson-Schley controversy over the honors of crossing the Atlantic on wing. The Navy won and there is, like Schley said at Santiago, "glory enough for all," who had a part in the great achievement.

How do the Democrats "wax" reconcile the decision by a large majority of the voters of Texas to make the Lone Star state dry, with the appeal of President Wilson to make the whole nation wet by repeal of wartime prohibition?

The trans-Atlantic flight, like the war on the other side of the Atlantic, has forced many of us to furnish up our knowledge of geography. But who remembers where Punta Delgada was, any way? And how many can now really tell where it is?

Who better than a "Barefoot Boy" could give advice—and good advice—to fathers as to how their boys should play?

The boys of Company D do not disparage Sherman's definition of war. They just did their best to send it where, in their agreement with Sherman, it belongs.

Making a health record that is a wonder was but in keeping with the other wonderful records the 110th Infantry made in the war.

The recognition by the council of four of the anti-Bolshevik government which is drawing a tight ring around the soviet forces of Lenin and Trotsky, looks more like a real Russian policy than the proposal to hold that Prince's island confab with the outthroats and murderers.

THE BIGGER PLAN.

Self looms large in the life we plan.
 But what do we do for our fellow-men?
 What do we plant and what do we sow
 For the joy of those we may never know?
 How many smiles we may never see
 In a kindly way have we caused to be?
 Our home is glad and our life is fair
 We have bravely stood to our days of care
 But what have we done in a larger way
 For the flag and the land that are ours today?
 We have life to spend, we have days and hours
 We may toil for gold or may toil for fame
 May we win whatever we wish to claim?
 Grow great in honor and truly own
 The joys we have sought for ourselves alone.
 But we still have lived by a selfish plan
 If we haven't thought of our fellow-man
 And never have turned, in his hour of need,
 To brighten his life by a kindly deed.
 There may be no state on the joys we know
 On the things we treasure no shame may show
 We may walk heads high, with our records true
 And take great pride in the deeds we do.
 But we haven't lived to a noble plan
 If we've had no thought for our fellow-man.
 If into the dream we have cherished long
 There has been no gleam of a righted wrong.
 No thought of a happier world to come
 When our hands are still and our lips are dumb.
 We must spend our lives for the ones we love
 But we still must cherish the flag above.
 We may work for joys that our own may know
 And follow our dreams as we come and go.
 And none may measure the choice we make
 Or the deeds we do for our loved ones' sake.
 But we shall be judged, when our souls have flown
 By more than the way that we served our own.
 For we shall have lived to a selfish plan
 If we've had no thought for our fellow-man.

another, and so on.

The general chairman reported that he attended the meeting which was held in the Slavish hall Sunday afternoon and that there was a representative there from every Slavish organization in the county. Anthony Pollock, who presided over the meeting, said that every lodge in the county would be represented in full uniform with flags and the most of them with bands. He requested that the central committee write to the superintendents of the various coke plants throughout the county and ask for a general shut-down on Wednesday, the big day. As it is, it was said, there will be about 1,800 Slavish people in line but if the shut-down could be secured, the crowd would be enormous.

Pittsburg District May Have Fully Attained Its Quota in Drive.

Some of the outlying churches have not yet made returns.

According to an official report from headquarters the Pittsburg area is short at this time not more than $600,000 of the quota of $7,500,000, on the basis of returns. It is believed, however, that were all returns in the quota would have been attained or

SCRAPS OF HUMOR

His Unlucky Legacy.
"Did your friend Jorner leave many personal belongings?" inquired Mr. Skett.
"Many is right," responded Mr. Telum. "He belonged to half a dozen bodes, the Red Cross, a zovave company, a drum corps, a church, a singing society and a suit pressing club."

The Garrulous Patient.
"You needn't tell me any more of your symptoms. I know what's the matter with you."
"But, doc, let me get 'em out of my system."
"That's why you're here, my friend. You can't get those symptoms out of your system by talking about them."

Any Old Job.
A convivialist playing the fatiguing streets of Boston with a full cargo of liquor on board observed a legend which ran: "Murderer Wanted," and asking time by the forelock, entered the station house and said to the sergeant: "I'll take that job."—Cartoons Magazine.

No Classical Aspirations.
"Your speech was a classic," said the admiring friend.
"Too bad," exclaimed Senator Sorghum. "But I did my best. I was particularly anxious to keep it from being really bound and stowed away in a library for future generations. I wanted the public to get it right now while it's hot."

"You smoke cigarettes?"
"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "I am not different from other women. I do not hesitate to sacrifice my personal comfort when it comes to keeping up appearances."

IN THE WRONG PLACE.
"Do you think our paper has enough nonsense in it?"
"Certainly, the editorials are full of it."

Work Already Done.
It isn't the job we intend to do. Or the labor we've just begun. That puts us right on the ledger sheet. It's the work we really have done.

THE USUAL THING.

"Ah, Sister Smellways," began Rev. D. Goodie Evans, who was making a pastoral visit, "when spring comes, don't you know, I fancy we all hear the call of the wild, and—"
"Thunder and guns!" howled an agonized voice from three rooms beyond. "Great Godfrey's cordial! Ethel, come quick!"
"Mercy! What was that?" asked the clergyman.
"The call of the wild," replied the housewife. "My husband is taking down a stove."—Kansas City Star.

Interpreting the Bard.
"What's Professor Diggs doing these days?"
"He says he's indulging in a Shakespearean 'orky'."
"Ah! A mild form of dissipation?"
"Not in Professor Diggs' case. He never dips into one of Shakespeare's plays without first fortifying himself with a dozen volumes of critical comment."

JOKES.
"Casey is my perticleker friend, I have ye know."
"G'wan! If he was perticleker, he wouldn't be yer friend."

Wept a Profitless.
There was a man in our town, Who had one wartime fear; That he couldn't keep the price wedged up, So he wept a profitless.

Diplomacy to the Winds.
Kid—Faw wants to know, Mr. Jones, if you'll trust him for a 15-pound turkey till pay night?
Butcher (nuzzled)—He didn't say that?
Kid—Well, not exactly. All he wants is two pounds of pork sausage, but I thought I'd begin high and then come down bit by bit if you proved stubborn.

Such Is Life.
"Man is a creature of routine. Goes to work and then goes home."
"That's right. If Shakespeare were to come along we'd be glad to see him, but what would we do with him?"
"Donno. Get him to autograph the family volume of his plays and then close the book."

A Billion Bushels of Potatoes

"THE American Potato association has set its mark at a billion bushels of potatoes a year. We ordinarily grow about three hundred millions, and owing to our imperfect methods of marketing, a large proportion of that amount goes to waste," says Mr. Frank Baackes, V. P. American Steel & Wire company.
"We can never have too many potatoes if we learn how to use them and utilize by-products. In the first place we ought never to market anything but No. 1 and No. 2 potatoes, carefully graded, free from blemishes; then we should utilize the culls by making them into stock food by dehydrating; and by making potato flour and by making farm fuel by extracting the alcohol.
"Probably twenty-five per cent of the potatoes we grow are wasted through careless handling and by improper storage. All farming should be run upon the same efficiency basis which has made manufacturing a success. It is not fair to make the consumer pay for the mistakes of the careless and ignorant. When farm practices is standardized, we can double our production and at the same time maintain our profit.

"For instance in the handling of potatoes, the old shaking, forking and shoveling process damages enough to change a profit into a loss. Potatoes should be graded by gravity. The No. 1 through a 1 1/2 inch screen on to a 1 1/4 inch screen for No. 2.
"All of these things will be done eventually, but in the meantime potatoes can be put in the silo. The government will send you a bulletin.
"Don't waste potatoes. Remember that the great middle class of people must eat and that we must all see to it that they are fed bountifully within their means. Potatoes properly handled will solve the problem."

LEARNING TO BE A CIVILIAN

Discharged British Soldier Testifies That He Finds New Feeling Out of Uniform.

Is the glamor of uniform wearing off?
After three years of service clothes I have just spent my first days in civilian attire. Surprising to tell, I believe I have met with more civility out of uniform than in it. "R. G." writes in the continental edition of the London Mail.
Two possible solutions of this remarkable attitude occur to me. The first is that most officers appear to be rather stern and stand-offish in uniform. The other solution, and perhaps an equally probable one, is that the public is getting tired of seeing so many officers going about aimlessly with apparently nothing much to do except to spend money and kill time.
Naturally, I suppose, when I first went out in "civies," I had the ingrained inclination to salute all superior officers I met and to prepare to take salutes from the ranks. It took me the best part of a day to overcome this impulse.
The "civ" habit was very strong, too. On my first morning as a civilian I had to see a colonel at the war office on business—business in which our standing was at least equal—and I immediately "sirred" him, of course. Force of habit, pure and simple.
Again there is the matter of running after an omnibus or across the road in uniform one tries to make a point of not doing these things. Now, however, when "example" has no longer to be considered, I find it practically impossible to chase an omnibus or flee from an oncoming taxicab. The instinct is against doing so.
Apparently it is just as necessary to relearn how to be a civilian as it once was to learn how to be a soldier.

SKILLFUL PIECE OF WORK

Novel Feat of Engineering Recently Put to the Credit of American Bridge Builders.

Not long ago it was discovered that the piers of the combined highway and railroad bridge across the Missouri river at St. Joseph, Mo., were in bad condition and it would be necessary to build new piers. At first it was proposed to build the new piers on the downstream side of the old bridge and shift the bridge laterally to the new position, in this way maintaining traffic over the old bridge while the new construction was going on. But the war department required the installation of a larger draw-span in the bridge and so it was decided to build the new piers between the old piers. After they were completed, the fixed spans of the bridge were moved shoreward edwise, so that they rested on the new piers. A temporary span was constructed to fill the gap thus occasioned, so that traffic was closed over the bridge for less than ten hours. Then work was begun upon the new swing span, which was built as a cantilever in open position. To permit of this, a portion of the old swing-span had to be cut away and a temporary lift-span was put in to take care of river traffic. Thus the bridge was reconstructed without changing its alignment.—Scientific American.

Our Book of Doom.
A doomsday book of a new sort has been produced by the alien property custodian. It approximates 500 pages and sets out the names of the enemy concerns that have been found in the United States. The custodian thinks his efforts have been without real cost to the country, since he brought to light for the treasury to collect more than $800,000 in income taxes which were being evaded. Besides the custodian turned some of the German concerns to war work and had them produce $30,000,000 worth of supplies.
The custodian's new book, says National Business, contains a deal of comfort for Americans who have claims against Germany and who have been wondering if they will have to wait for payment until Germany makes up her mind about the variety of government she likes best. The state department has hinted that American claimants may get immediate reimbursement from the funds the custodian has collected.

UNCLE SAM TRAINED 75,000 DRIVERS FOR DIFFICULT TASKS DURING THE WAR

United States Motor Transports Used in Carrying Supplies to Front in France.

When Uncle Sam's armies finished the war the motor transport corps comprised a force of roughly 150,000 trained drivers of motortrucks, cars and motorcycles.

Of this great force, only about half were trained drivers when they enlisted for the service, so it was necessary in order to have this force of men to train 75,000 men to drive automotive vehicles.

The ammunition trains, supply trains, sanitary trains and casual motorized units which first went overseas were composed of trained drivers, as a rule. Those who came after were the men who did not know cars, engines, or any of the problems of driving over roads under shell fire or with the great congestion of the roads to the fighting zone in France. The men who came in the second great rush of men for the army had therefore to be trained from the very beginning to know the machine, and then to know the problems of driving in formation on military roads.

Big Problems Presented.
The two big phases were the teaching of the mechanism of the truck engine—I say truck because this was by far the more vital part of the training of driving in military formations of huge fleets of trucks.

Now that the war is over the problem of teaching the mechanism of the machine is by far the more important to the commercial truck operator. As to the military formation required in the army, this can be disposed of quickly.

On the Mexican border, and with the Pershing expedition into Mexico, the problem of mass operations with trucks was of minor importance. The drivers went forward with some semblance of military formation, with certain distances between trucks, and with some attempt at military cohesion. The truck work, however, was more or less of a problem of every man to drive his own machine.

New System Developed.

When the American army reached France, with the greatly restricted area of operation, the shorter distances for ordinary hauls, and the intense congestion of the roads, it was necessary to develop a military precision in handling of trucks, before that unheard of. The French transport was first to develop this precision, and its vital need was shown in the British offensive on the Aisne in 1917, when the enormous number of over 5,000 trucks moved an entire British corps in military formation into the fighting line. Such a column meant nearly 100 miles of length for the train. And to have this body of trucks operating properly the strictest discipline was required.

This truck discipline was first systematized on the French lines by work and experiments at Camp Johnson, Fla., near Jacksonville, the mother school of the motor transport corps, and was soon developed into book form and standardized for the army.

Thorough Training Given.

To the commercial truck operator, however, the work done to train the drivers in the handling of their vehicles was far more important. Every man who went into the corps was given a thorough training in the operation of the motor vehicles, and while the Camp Johnson school was working out truck discipline enormous repair and shop units were in full operation in other parts of the country. Such, for instance at Camp Holabird, near Baltimore, and at Atlanta, while over in the West there were such units as at San Antonio. These were mechanical organizations for repair work and for shop training.

RULES FOR RADIATORS

The radiator takes so little care that we are likely to give it even less than it requires. Here is a simple rule which will give good results:

1. Keep it full, especially with a thermo-syphon cooling system. The less the water, the less the cooling effect and the more for the motor by overheating.
2. Keep it full when using alcohol in winter. The smaller the volume of mixture, the sooner it boils and evaporates.
3. Keep it full.

TO PROPERLY CUT GASKETS

Plan Which Will Be Found Convenient for Owners of Cars—Frayed Edges Avoided.

Everyone who owns a car has had difficulty with cutting gaskets. Try this method the next time: Put the material—rubber, felt, paper, etc.—over the hole for which it is being cut. Take a ball-head hammer and place it on the material over the hole. Then tap this ball hammer gently with another hammer, and the gasket can be cut without the frayed edges that are so annoying.

KEEP WHEELS IN ALIGNMENT

When Car Has Suffered Bump or Crash Against Curb, Wheels Should Be Tested at Once.

Whenever the car has suffered a bump of any kind, a crash against the curb or anything of the sort, the wheels should immediately be tested for alignment, as a bang of this kind is quite enough to force them out of correct alignment, which will lead to excessive wear.

OIL WILL SILENCE SQUEAKS

If in Hurry to Stop Noise Pour Little Kerosene Over Spring and Shake Car.

If in a hurry to stop a spring from squeaking, pour a little kerosene over it, guiding the oil down the sides with the finger so that it will run between the leaves. Wipe off the excess. Pour cylinder oil over the springs the same way. Now shake the car so the oil will be drawn in and find the squeak.

SELF-LUBRICATING BUSHING

Comparatively Easy by Drilling Holes and Packing With Graphite Every Six Months.

It is comparatively easy to make a self-lubricating bushing for the spring bolt by drilling, say eight holes, each 1/16 of an inch in diameter through a new bronze bushing. These holes are packed with graphite. When the bushing is in place. By removing the spring bolt every six months and re-packing the bushing with graphite, a nearly self-lubricating bushing, as far as lubrication goes, will result.

EMERGENCY WHEEL FOR AUTO

Device, Mounted on Axle, Can Be Readily Attached to Disabled Cars by Clamps.

For the garageman who encounters road jobs that necessitate towing in a car with a broken wheel, or axle, an emergency wheel, such as is used by one suburban repair shop, is not only adaptable to most any kind of car, electric, gasoline, or steam, but is quickly made up of discarded materials with but little work, says Popular Mechanics.

The wheel is of the regular automobile type with a 24 by 4-inch pneumatic tire, this size being suitable for use on both large and small cars. The axle is either a broken front axle or a short section of a strong steel beam. The emergency axle is bent or dropped, the offset being necessary to clear the axle-housing flange or brake drum. The device is attached by means of two U-shaped clamps and nuts. The sketch shows the general appearance and manner of attaching the emergency wheel to the rear axle of a car, but it may also be used in front, as the clamps are easily shifted.

TO SILENCE RATTLING RODS

Noise Made in Source of Much Annoyance to Occupants of Car—Way to Remedy Trouble.

Where long rods of small diameter are used for brake connections, and so forth, particularly on the smaller cars, the rattle and chattering they make is a source of constant annoyance. There is an easy way, however, to put a stop to these noises. A coil spring one-half inch to an inch in diameter should be firmly attached at one end to the middle of each rod and the other end extended under tension to the frame side member or some other convenient point for anchorage. The tension on these springs will hold the rods rigid and prevent vibration and noise.

NAIL MAKES TEMPORARY PIN

Not Strong Enough for Permanent Repair, but Will Suffice in Cases of Emergency.

Breakage of a taper pin on a magnetic driveshaft or similar important part frequently causes delay and annoyance to motorists, especially if it occurs on the road, when another taper pin of the right size usually is unavailable. If this is the case a temporary pin may be quickly filed from a nail or similar piece of stock, which, while not strong enough for permanent repair, will suffice for the time it takes to secure a new pin.

POLARINE

If your motor sounds like the well-known anvil chorus, get rid of that carbon and begin to use Atlantic Motor Oils. And keep rid of it. Ask your garageman whether you should use Atlantic Polarine, Atlantic Light, Medium or Heavy.

SURE WAY TO STOP FUGACIOUS TY COBB

It isn't every player who can cope with Ty Cobb. Yet in St. Louis years ago there was a quiet, modest little catcher named Paul Kritchell, who evolved out of his own vast brain a means of circumventing the wily fugacious Ty. One afternoon Cobb was on first; as is his custom when the chance looks halfway good, he broke for second. Kritchell, wild to make the peg, dropped the ball. Hurriedly picking it up, he slammed the pit across to third, shouting: "Get him when he comes around there!"—and, sure as fate, Cobb, trying to snare an extra base on the misnomer, arrived at third, only to find the ball waiting for him in the third baseman's leathery hand!

IVAN OLSON IS MOST RELIABLE AS PLAYER

Commences His Fifth Season With Brooklyn Superbas.

Infielder Knows Baseball From A to Z and Should Prove Manager Robison's Most Able Lieutenant—Faster Than Ever.

This is Ivan Olson's ninth season in fast company and his fifth with the Brooklyn Superbas. Olson was claimed by the Cleveland club from Portland back in 1911, remained with Cleveland four seasons, "stayed a minute" with the Cincinnati Reds in 1915, and was waived over to Brooklyn in the midst of the 1915 season.

When Ole went back to California last September he got himself a job with an oil concern in Los Angeles. That was a sort of hiatus in his life. In other years he wintered in the Pacific Coast league or hunted or some such thing, but work—nothing doing.

Ivan Olson.

They had a ball team in that oil concern and Ole joined it, training three times a week and playing Sundays when the influenza ban was not in force. His ball playing and steady work had a remarkable effect. It put Olson in the best condition he ever was in his long career on the diamond, and that dates from 1908, when he broke in with Muskogee of the Three-Lee league.

Today, at the age of 34, when most fielders are slipping, Ivy is one of the most reliable players on the Brooklyn team. He knows baseball from A to Z and should be Robison's chief lieutenant now that Jack Coombs has departed. He is showing the splendid effects of that winter training by his brilliant all-around work, and should continue at top speed for some time to come. His fielding is better than ever, he is hitting harder and is faster on the bases. His coaching of the other infielders and the pitchers while a game is on is another valuable asset. Ivy has the distinction of being the most consistently "panned" player Brooklyn ever had, but he has thrived on the panning.

Robert Perdue, the former Boston and St. Louis National league pitcher, is now pitching for the New Orleans club of the Southern association.

BASEBALL STORIES

Gene Buckard, the little southpaw, is going great for the Phillies.

"Dixie" Davis will be a strong asset to the Colonels this season.

Walter Johnson is reported to be in his usual excellent condition.

Beany Kauff hasn't been hitting much for the Giants this spring.

Jay Kline will again play the first sack for the Colonels this season.

Any manager can find a batter to the plate, but he can not make him hit.

Johnny McCarthy, last year with the Columbus club, will play with Toledo this season.

Pitcher Stewart of the Chicago White Sox has been purchased by the Bloomington club.

Fred Mitchell is said to be far from happy at the showing of the National league champions this spring.

Babe Ruth began making records early this year. He has a long way to go, American league pitchers regret.

Joe McCarthy of the Colonels is in better condition this spring than he has been in the last half dozen seasons.

The St. Louis Browns won the major league city championship this spring by defeating the St. Louis Cardinals 4 games to 2.

The Giants certainly have a very impressive outfield as regards batting.

Joe Leonard puts plenty of pep in a game when he is working on the coaching lines.

If Johnny Lavan comes back the Washington infield should do some regular clubbing.

MEET AFTER TWO YEARS OF WAR

Fathers—From Chicago Hold Happy Reunion in Paris.

ONE AMONG FIRST PRISONERS

Harry Loughman Was Among First 1,000 Yanks to Fight Huns and Among the First Eleven to Be Captured—Spent Long Year in German Prison Camps—Honored by Being Made Peace Conference Guard—Brother Steve Also Saw Action.

"Lo, Steve!"

"Why, b'gosh, it's Hy. Howdy, bud."

"By the way, where'd you come from?"

The two clasped hands. And so Private Harry Loughman, after a span of two years of war, met his brother, Steve, in Paris.

Back on April 6, 1917, the Loughman home at 461 Oakwood boulevard, Chicago, was a twitter over the declaration of war. Harry the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen El Loughman, enlisted that day.

In First Ten Thousand

The next day he said good-by to his younger brother, Stephen, and left for France. In a short time he was across among the first 10,000 Yanks to reach France. He was among the first 1,000 to fight the Huns and among the first eleven to be captured.

Back home, Stephen, only 18, learned for action and a sight of France. He joined his parents' permission, became a patriotic forerunner by telling the rest of the officers that he was 18 and joined the army. He, too, went over and did his part in the fight.

Came peace. Harry was released from a German prison and named as a member of the president's guard of honor at the peace conference. Steve, with his detachment in Luxembourg, obtained a furlough and went to see Paris. It was there that they met after a span of two years.

Emotion is taboo in the American expeditionary force, but the gruff soldiers who saw the reunion between the two young brothers, admit they temporarily lost all interest in the fourteen points and freedom of the seas. The colonel himself tossed his brand new cigar out of the window and remarked he'd better be going to write some letters home.

Harry, after enlisting, got across in three months, fought on the Lorraine front and was captured November 3. Transferred from camp to camp, he finally got to the "strife" camp at Tulle, where he was kept in underground quarters. There were 45,000 Russians there. It was their duty to haul logs a distance of fourteen miles each day. Food consisted chiefly of thin potato soup. Through mediation of the Red Cross, he was removed to a camp near Baden. A month after the armistice he was released. It required one month at a base hospital in Vichy to regain his strength partly.

Then he was honored by appointment to the peace conference guard company 2, and will return to the states with President Wilson. Steve returned to his company in Luxembourg after the reunion.

Writes to Parents.

"Dear mother and father," writes Harry "we are together again for the first time in about two years. Steve looks fine. I was quond at the president's house when Steve was out to my barracks looking for me. I was relieved before noon on Friday, and when I arrived at barracks, outside Paris, they all said my brother Steve was here."

"I found a note he left in the office asking me to meet him in a Y. M. C. A. hotel in Paris so I left in a hurry for the subway. I was just going down the stairs. Who comes up but Steve. Gee, it sure made me happy to meet him. We both are here in the reading room of the Soldiers and Sailors' club. We are going to have our pictures taken. Steve is leaving tomorrow morning."

"Love to all. Give Margaret my regards."

Sailor Son's Infrequent Visits

D. A. D. Parker of Concordia, Kan. received a visit one night from his son, Lieutenant Commander C. F. Parker, being the second visit in the last 25 years. At the age of twelve years this son went to sea. For some years before the war he was sailing on the Pacific and has been captain of the ship Rose City. Last summer he was transferred from the Pacific to the Atlantic and became captain of the West Mount. Just recently he was again transferred to the Pacific ocean and made commander in the naval reserve.

THEIR LAST DANCE TOGETHER

Mrs. Castle Tells a Pretty Story of Her Final Performance With Her Husband.

THEIR LAST DANCE TOGETHER

Mrs. Castle Tells a Pretty Story of Her Final Performance With Her Husband.

Irene Castle's memories of her late husband, Capt. Vernon Castle, conclude in everybody's with the following account of their last public appearance.

Our last dance together was while he was instructing up at Camp Mohawk, Canada. He had been given permission to come to New York, especially to dance with me at a British recruiting benefit which was held at the New York hippodrome. Because of the nature of the occasion he had been given permission to dance in uniform. It had been long since we had danced our old dances together and it had been necessary the day before to work quite hard in brushing up. I had expected that Vernon would have forgotten altogether a lot of the steps or that he would be a little stiff from lack of practice but on the night of the benefit he danced divinely. At the close of the performance many beautiful flowers were handed to us over the footlights. We bowed and bowed again our thanks. In the wings Vernon nervously kissed my hand and there were tears in his eyes. I wonder if he guessed we had danced our last dance, and the last ring of applause for us was still.

"The world had been very good to us. We had lived well and lavishly because of that same applause. To either we tasted success, fame and money. Thank God that at no time during that night did I dream it was the end."

SIMILAR TO SHELL SHOCK

Malady Affecting Those Unfortunate Enough to Be on Ships That Were Torpedoed

Cases have lately come to the attention of the military surgeons where the fright and fear due to ships being torpedoed have given rise to symptoms suggestive of shell shock. Doctor Cluett in a communication to the Neurological society of Paris has described the mental effect observed when on board a ship which was torpedoed.

After the first stupefaction following the attack it was observed that several passengers discharged guns into the air or into the sea. In other words the pent up nervous energy found release in letting loose the immense energy concentrated in explosives. Similarly it was well known at the front that a long day of waiting in the trenches was productive of more cases of shell shock than a day of active engagement with the enemy. Next there were a few cases of suicide among the passengers. These passengers were on the whole calm enough even on the life rafts. It was only when they were on the rescuing ship that psychoneurotic phenomena began to develop including mutism, spasmodic weeping, laughter, tremors, spasmodic movements of the limbs, etc.

THE VERSATILE CARROT

There is nothing like a war to change the status of things. Look, for example, at the humble carrot. Before the war it was one of the lowliest of all the vegetables, seldom used except for stews or New England hotted clambroths but it certainly has been doing its bit in the culinary line recently. It has become a past master in the art of camouflage. Grated raw, it is said to be a very good substitute for eggs in certain things. Little slices dried become raisins and currants, and other bits, treated a little differently, masquerade as candied orange and lemon peel. Orange marmalade and certain kinds of jam are made of them and large chunks of them boiled and sugared make wonderful candied fruits of every kind—pineapples, pears, apricots, cherries—and are used by many caterers to give their war cakes and puddings a prosperous and festive look.

Work for East Indian Women

The thought of Mohammedans fighting for Christian ideals, of dark age heathenism taking up arms for the cause of civilization and humanity, opens a vista that would be staggered were it not that the idea has long been dreamed of.

As one result of the war, the women of India have for the first time worked in the government departments in Delhi and the question is being debated as to giving women equal representation with men in the plans of the Indian National society. In all the battle for larger things India has met the problems common to all lands with the most modern efficient and self-sacrificing methods.

Exports Increase

American dairy products are more favorably received in Europe than ever. Exports of condensed milk to Europe rose from 18,000,000 pounds in 1914 to 530,000,000 in 1918 and there were notable increases in the export of other dairy products. Most of this was due to war demands but there seems an opportunity to expand in dairy exports a normal increase in demand in this country is justified providing there is the necessary increase in field crops.

Forty years ago Rev. I. A. Sutton of La Rue, O. performed a marriage and the bridegroom forgot to hand over the customary fee. Through the mail Rev. Sutton has received a $10 bill and a note accompanying says it is from a "stuck-up conscience." As Reverend Sutton has performed 714 marriage ceremonies he does not remember the one who "forgot."

Physicians Recommend Castoria

YOU know the real human doctors right around in your neighborhood: the doctors made of flesh and blood just like you: the doctors with souls and hearts: those men who are responding to your call in the dead of night as readily as in the broad daylight; they are ready to tell you the good that Fletcher's Castoria has done, is doing and will do, from their experience and their love for children.

Fletcher's Castoria is nothing new. We are not asking you to try an experiment. We just want to impress upon you the importance of buying Fletcher's.

Your physician will tell you this, as he knows there are a number of imitations on the market, and he is particularly interested in the welfare of your baby.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Do the People Know?

Do you know why you are asked to call for Fletcher's Castoria when you want a child's remedy? Why you must insist on Fletcher's?

For years we have been explaining how the popularity of Fletcher's Castoria has brought out innumerable imitations, substitutes and counterfeits.

To protect the babies: to shield the homes and in defense of generations to come we appeal to the better judgment of parents to insist on having Fletcher's Castoria when in need of a child's medicine. And remember above all things that a child's medicine is made for children—a medicine prepared for grown-ups is not interchangeable. A baby's food for a baby. And a baby's medicine is just as essential for the baby.

The Castoria Recipe (it's on every wrapper) has been prepared by the same hands in the same manner for so many years that the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and perfection in the product are synonymous.

CHAPTER V.

The Game Begins.

Teresa de la Guerra's face went red and white, and Torre, feeling, smiled. She heard in the words only an insult to her beloved papa grande, knowing as she so well knew that of all men the old Spaniard hated his arrogant young kinsman most implacably.

"We don't understand," she said presently, turning her back upon the man at table and addressing Stanway. "Perhaps Captain Juarez' call will clear matters for us. Will you come with me, Senor Stanway?"

Torre's face darkened as he watched them go out together.

In the drawing room, in much worn uniform bespeaking his rank, a very broad, heavy-set Mexican, swarthy, hard-featured, keen-eyed, was waiting. He bowed deeply as they entered.

"Senorita," he said briskly, his eyes disregarding Stanway and resting upon the girl's face in a keen regard, "it is an unpleasant duty which brings me here this morning."

"Be seated," she said quietly, going to a chair. "But first, Captain Juarez, this is my friend, Senor Stanway of the Painted Rock ranch."

The two men bowed coolly. Stanway remained standing near the girl's chair, while Juarez sat down.

"We of poor Mexico," said the captain shortly, "are fighting hard for a dear cause. We sacrifice ourselves, our hopes, our homes for the thing we love most, senorita."

"And that is our country. We do things which we do not like to do simply because it is our duty to take any opportunity which chance gives us to free the neck of our land from the foot of the tyrant."

Teresa bowed.

"And you have called this morning, you have crossed the border—"

"At the behest of a Mexican's day. Senorita, your grandfather is well and sends his love to you."

"Tell me," she cried impetuously, "where is he?"

"Many miles beyond the border," he answered succinctly. "In the hands of friends—if he accedes to our demands," significantly.

"And those demands?" curiously.

"I have not as yet made him," returned the captain. "Allow me to explain, senorita. I know Senor de la Guerra, if not personally at least very well by repute. I know that he does not love my Mexico, and that he is very stubborn."

"Our cause needs money and he has it in great, unnecessary quantities."

"Had I made a demand upon him for a note to you, stating that he was held for ransom and urging you to pay it, I know that he would have refused. So I come straight to you, without so much as a word to him, informing you that unless the money is sent immediately—"

He broke off, shrugging his shoulders.

"You realize, senor," broke in Stanway coolly, "that this is rather an unusual sort of thing at this day? That if it is not without danger to you? If the senorita were not disposed to give what you ask, if on the other hand we held you for the crime you have committed—"

Again the captain shrugged.

"It would mean imprisonment for me, or perhaps death," he answered promptly. "Things which a soldier faces every day of his life and grows to think nothing about. And—pardon me, senorita—it would mean the death of the Senor de la Guerra."

Again a little shiver trembled through the frame of the girl. Stanway, his eyes steady upon the Mexican's, was silent a moment. Finally he said, turning to Teresa:

"Before you give this gentleman his answer, senorita, may I ask for a few words with you?"

"May I interrupt again?" It was Eduardo Ramon Torre, insolent and debonaire, bowing in the doorway, a fresh, cigarette between his fingers. "Buenos dias, Senor Captain."

Captain Juarez stared at him fixedly, his hard eyes as insolent as those of Torre, and made no answer.

"I think, senor," went on Torre in mock courtesy, still lounging in the doorway, "that it is with me that you wish to deal. Am I not right, prima mia?" lightly to Teresa.

The girl's eyes darkened. Juarez looked from one to another curiously. "I think," he said slowly, "that I can have business with no one except the senorita. She is the one to speak in a case like this one, since the old senor is not here to speak for himself and she is his heiress."

"Let your keen eyes rest on this," Torre drew the will from his pocket and carelessly tossed it into Juarez' lap.

The Mexican looked at it swiftly, his eye ran down the written sheet, and he started palpably when his glance rested upon the name Eduardo Ramon Torre.

"I have been misinformed," he cried, starting to his feet. "The senorita is not the heiress. It is Senor Torre who inherits!"

"Seguro," replied Torre, putting out his shapely hand for the will. "And I, senor, am that Senor Torre. Now, what do you want?"

"This is true, senorita?" Juarez whirled about, his eyes bright and hard upon Teresa's.

"You come from papa grande," she answered him guardedly. "Did he not tell you of a change in his will?"

"We did not speak," Juarez reminded her. "As I have said, I know that it would be useless to talk with him. He knows only that he is being held; he does not know why. I know only, and he resorted to the shrew so much a part of his method of speech, 'that rumor has it that you are his heiress, and this paper states that Torre inherits.'"

"Rumor at times is misinformed," Torre said smilingly. "You have the will and testament itself before you. If it is sufficiently plain that I and not the senorita," with an apologetic bow to Teresa, "represent my kinsman; I trust that you will state your errand concisely."

"It is this," said Juarez shortly. "El Senor de la Guerra is held by my men for ransom. Twenty thousand dollars will bring him back to you promptly, without a scratch on him. A refusal to pay will be a signal for his death."

"So," remarked Torre coolly. "It is only twenty thousand dollars. You are modest, senor!"

"American money," Juarez added as coolly.

"American money," nodded Torre. "That is better than Mexican pesos, at any rate. It is at least less insulting to my kinsman."

Captain Juarez made no reply. Teresa and Stanway looked at each other swiftly.

Torre, smiling as though the whole matter were merely amusing, addressed himself to the girl.

"Teresa," and she flushed under the easy familiarity, "perhaps the valiant captain has not yet breakfasted. He has a long ride before him and it would be better if he should not carry away a misunderstanding of the De la Guerra hospitality. Also, while he has his coffee, you and I might discuss the situation?"

"Yes," the girl agreed slowly. "That would perhaps be best." Her hand went to the bell cord to summon Pedro. "We have just breakfasted, senor captain. If you will go with Pedro he will see that you are served. And Senor Torre, Senor Stanway and myself can avail ourselves of the time to come to a decision."

The captain bowed, and with no hesitation turned his back on them to follow the servant to the dining room. Torre came in, sat down, crossing his legs with elaborate care to the crease in his trousers, and favored Stanway with a look which mocked openly.

"An interesting situation, is it not, senor?" he asked lightly.

"An extremely hazardous game you are playing, Torre," cried Stanway angrily.

"It?" Torre lifted his brows. "It is not I who play. It is I who watch the game."

"Watch the pawns your own fine hand has set moving?" was Stanway's heated retort. "Do you think that you can get away with a thing of this kind, Torre? Why, man, it smells to heaven!"

"Recriminations aside—at least shall we postpone them? There is a crisis demanding attention. Now," lifting his hand against Stanway's words, "I have a proposition to make—to you, Teresa."

"What is it?" she asked coldly.

"Merely this: As heir to the De la Guerra estate I may be a prejudiced person. You, with no personal interest, and a quick light flicked in his eyes at the girl's winning at his words, "are the one to decide. Shall the captain's request be granted? I leave it to you, senorita. Entirely to you."

Teresa bit her lip, the color surging angrily into her cheeks. She saw the trap as plainly as did Torre, and she did not see the answer to make.

"It is perhaps not impossible," went on Torre evenly, "that a large part of the sum mentioned is now on the premises. We all know that my kinsman has always been his own banker; that he at all times has been able to produce a large amount of gold at a moment's notice."

"Unfortunately, in answering his summons to the ranch, I came too late for him to make me cognizant of the hiding place. Perhaps you, prima mia, are better informed?"

"Perhaps," she answered him quietly, though the color still ran red in her cheeks.

"And perhaps," added Stanway significantly, "Senor Torre would be glad to have knowledge of this hiding place; would be glad to have the money handed over to his emissary?"

"Emissary?" Again Torre's black brows arched. "The fabrications of the American's suspicions are truly wonderful! He would suspect me of robbing myself?"

He laughed insolently. Stanway looked questioning at the girl.

"Prima mia," began Torre.

The girl whirled upon him, her eyes flashing.

"Senor Torre," she cried passionately, "you make it necessary for me to remind you that our relationship is not of my choosing, and that we are not close enough for you to call me cousin! If you find it necessary to address me at all I should like to be addressed as Senorita de la Guerra. Please remember."

Torre flushed angrily but managed his careless smile.

"As you wish, Senorita de la Guerra," he retorted. "May I suggest something?"

"What is it?" shortly.

"Merely this: This man who calls himself Captain Juarez may be a rank impostor, as well as a scoundrel. Before even considering the matter of a ransom would it not be well to ask him to prove to us that he knows at least where our kinsman is? If you rang for Pedro again and sent him with the message—"

Teresa rang and sat in a musing silence until Pedro came.

"Pedro," she said then, "tell Captain Juarez that we are considering his proposition. Tell him further that we wish to be certain that he really comes from the senor."

Pedro bowed, withdrew, and returned almost immediately, his face strangely white, his hand shaking as he held out something to the girl.

"It is the master's ring," he said, deeply agitated. "The ring he wore always upon his left hand. Senorita, senorita," his voice choking, his eyes glistening, "you will not let them kill him?"

"No, Pedro," she said, the ring, her own eyes shining. "If harm comes to him, Pedro," she went on steadily, "we shall know what to do, shall we not?"

Pedro made no spoken answer. But his eyes, suddenly hard and cruel, went straight to Torre, resting full of meaning upon him. Then, turning abruptly, the servant left the room.

"It is papa grande's ring, Senor Stanway," she ignored Torre entirely. "I am afraid that Captain Juarez speaks the truth."

Stanway stood with drawn brows, staring at the floor. The whole affair was so eloquent of reality on the part of the debonaire, black-mustached Torre it was so inconceivable that his presence here now was not a part of dark design, so ridiculous to suppose that Antonio de la Guerra had ever really purposed disinherit the girl who was dearer to him than daughters to most men—and yet what to do?

Suddenly Stanway bent forward, whispering swiftly, guardedly, to the girl.

And then, after Stanway had finished and stood erect again, looking down upon her, as Torre watched, his eyes narrowing suspiciously, her head clenched, her chin squared, determination came into her men and voice.

"It is a chance, senor," she said. She rose and stood looking at him steadily, still ignoring Torre. "It is a game of dice with our destinies."

"And you will play it, senorita?" eagerly from the American.

She made a little gesture as though she were handing something to him. "I place the dicebox in your hands, May I, Senor Billy?"

"Then," cried Stanway, "we must waste no time! Call Pedro."

She rang. Torre, still watching suspiciously, made no comment. Pedro came in his swift, silent fashion.

"Send word to Gancho to come to the house immediately," Stanway told him. "Let him bring three men with him. Let them come armed. And see that Captain Juarez does not leave the house. I, shall—entertain, Senor Torre."

A quick light of understanding leaped up in Pedro's eyes. He turned with a brief, grunted "Bueno," and hurried on his errand.

Torre had leaped to his feet, his face crimson.

"What does this mean?" he cried sharply. "As help to the De la Guerra estates I demand—"

DOUGHBOY BEST FIGHTER OF ALL, THOMPSON SAYS

Never Saw Yankees "Licked," Declares Commander of "Fighting Tenth."

ARE SALT OF THE EARTH

Fine Tribute Paid to the Men of the Keystone Division in Address Before the Senate at Harrisburg; Acts of Heroism on Part of Men Told.

HARRISBURG, May 25.—"God bless the American doughboy! I think he is the noblest creature in God's world. He is the salt of the earth."

Such was the tribute paid by Colonel Joseph H. Thompson, Beaver Pails, who commanded the 10th Infantry, formerly the "Fighting Tenth," Pennsylvania, to the Keystone Division and the members of the American Army in general in an address before the members of the Senate and House of Representatives in the Senate chamber last night.

Colonel Thompson, a former member of the State Senate, came here at the invitation of the Senate.

"I just read several days ago where a certain division claims the record for gaining the greatest amount of ground," said Colonel Thompson. "In the woods north of the Ourcq River, our casualties in that fight were 1,100.
The others never took a man or a gun.
Why, if it hadn't been for the Keystone Division, that division would have been lost."

Colonel Thompson told of the battle of the Marne, in which companies of his regiment participated. He told how Company B, of New Brighton, and Company C of Somerset, had been placed between companies of the French infantry. Here the colonel pointed out one of the differences in the fighting of the Americans and the French.

The French, he said, when they would take up a position, would retire a short distance and take up another position. If the Boche were too strong, and fight from the new location. The Americans would never retire unless "licked," he said, and added that he had "never seen this."

In the Marne fight, in which the Western Pennsylvania companies were brigaded with the French Colonel Thompson said word was sent by the French commander that a retirement was to be made to another position, where the battle would be resumed.

"We're put up here to fight and we are going to stick," was the word sent back from the commanders of the Pennsylvania companies. "Such actions," said Colonel Thompson,
"not only proved the worth of the 28th but the entire American Army."
"I recall the work of one of the boys in the regiment," said Colonel Thompson, "who killed 18 Germans, and he knew where their bodies were to be found."

The colonel spoke of the work of the Pennsylvanians around Chateau-Thierry and said the 56th Brigade had taken two strategic points north of that place for which it has not been given credit. He said that he himself referred to this in the hope that his listeners will correct the error in writing the history of the big struggle.

The fighting qualities of the Pen-sylvania soldiers can best be described, Colonel Thompson pointed out, by the Germans themselves. He told of a batch of prisoners being brought in, among them some who could speak English.

"One of them said the Americans knew nothing about warfare. 'If you had been British or French,' he said,
'we would have known what you were going to do; but you Americans don't know when you're licked.'"

In closing, Colonel Thompson declared that before the war the American flag was little respected beyond the borders of the country. "But now," he said, "Old Glory is respected wherever she is flown in the breeze. That is not because of what the officers did, not because of what the statesmen did, but because of what the doughboys did."

ALL HONOR TO OUR HEROIC DEAD

Memorial Day should mean much to all of us this year.

Many soldiers of our own time and kindred are sleeping their last long sleep away over the seas.

Let us resolve that the victories they won shall not have been in vain; that we shall remain forever true to the ideals for which they laid down their lives—
Liberty and justice throughout the whole world.
